SELECTION OF GUESTS ISCAUSEOF ROYAL ROW

Don Luis of Bourbon Is Called to Task by King

Alfonso. BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

NASMUCH as there were a considerable number of Americans present at the entertainment given by the Infanta Eulalie's son, Don Luis of Bourbon, at the Polo Club, at Paris, of Bourson, at the Polo Club, at Paris, the other day, it is only right and proper to call attention to the fact that the selection of some of his guests has excited the intense indignation of the members of his family in France and in Spain. To such an extent is this the case that he has been persentertly. peremptorily summoned to Madrid by King Alfonso, and by his command has canceled all his further social engagements in Paris.
What excited on the part of the members of the royal house of Bour-bon more reprobation than anything else is the fact that he should have presumed to ask to his fete the morganatic widow of Prince Pascal de Bourbon, Comte de Barl, and that she should have figured on his invitations as "Princess Pascal of Bourbon."

Pascal, half-brother of ex-King Francis of Naples, was the black sheep of his family, was invoved in no end of unsavory scrapes, and in 1878 disgraced himself by his marriage to a woman of the French half-world, who styled herself "Mile. Blanche de Mar-connay." He had at the time no money, his mother, the Dowager Queen of Naples, by birth an Austrian arch-duchess, having stopped his allowance, in order to force him to behave him-and only consented to marry Prince Pascal, in Paris, on the condition that he should acknowledge himself before notary and before the Mayor to be the father of her illegitimate son. Henry, then some fifteen years of age, and who had figured up to that time on the registers of birth as of un-known father. Of course, Pascal's relatives protested against this at-tempt to endow the demi-mondaine's son with the historic name of Bourbon. and applied to the French courts, which annulled Prince Pascal's recognition of the boy as his offspring, on the ground that when the boy was born Prince Pascal was himself but eleven years of age, was living in Rome with his mother, had never set foot in Paris, and had never seen or heard of Blanche Marconnay. One French court after another prohibited the now near fifty-year-old son of Blanche de Marconnay from styling himself Henri de Bourbon, or Prince of Bourbon or Count de Bari, the decision being confirmed on final appeal to the timation that the stepson of the late Prince Pascal de Pourbon would be liable to heavy fine and imprisonment if he persisted in disobeying the or-ders of the French court.

The man's mother having been duly married to the late Prince Pascal de Bourbon, it was found impossible to prevent her, by means of legal process, from styling herself Princess Pascal Asquith strongly urged upon Crawshay de Bourbon in France. But she has Williams the necessity of preventing never been recognized as such by the any scandal involving prominent memany court in Europe, or by the French, Spanish or Italian aristocracy, and tifat Infanta Eulalie's son should have invited this once so notorious woman to his fete, as Princess Pascal de Bourbon, asking her to meet as such all his other guests, who included some representatives of the greatest houses of the French aristocracy, has created a sensation, not only in the Their mark French metropolis, but likewise at somewhat cited a good deal of criticism by the extraordinary character of the people with whom he associates. This, however, is the climax of his indiscretions in this respect, and it will be a long time before he is able to efface the memory thereof. Prince Luis, unlike his elder brother, Alfonso, is unmarried, holds no com-mission in the Spanish army, nor has he received the Order of the Golden Fleece, which his brother and most of his Spanish relatives possess. He was brought up in England, at Beaumont Coilege, near Windsor, which is the Roman Catholic counterpart of Eton, and afterwards studied at Heidelberg. Since then he has lived almost entirely in Paris, where he created a sensation some months ago by announcing his determination to become an actor. In obedience to protests from the court of Madrid, where he ranks as an infant of Spain, his appearance before the footlights in professional company were limited to public performances for the sake of charity.

Cecil Rhodes's name is so frequently put forward as having been an en-thusiastic supporter of the movement In England in favor of home rule for ireland that it may be just as well to recall the circumstances under which he made that gift of $50,000 to Charles Stewart Parnell for his party, which constitutes the only manifestation of good will towards Irish nationalism ever recorded of him.

In 1889 Cecil Rhodes was trying to get a charter from Parliament in England, ratifying certain concessions in Matabeleland, which he had obtained. Learning that the matter would encounter a good deal of opposition in the House of Commons, he sent a $50,-000 check to Parnell, and masmuch as the Irish party all became convinced thereby that Rhodes had become a supporter of their cause, they to a man voted in favor of his Matabeleland charter.

Some months later two of the leading members of the Nationalist party came out to South Africa on a prosely-tizing mission, and naturally expected to receive not only the indorsement of the colossus, but also an enthusiastic welcome from him. Instead of that, he pointedly avoided them, and re-frained from meeting them and from showing them any attention whatever during their visit. In fact, when he learned that they were arriving at Johannesburg, he hastily left for Pretoria, to stay with Sir Ralph Williams, afterwards Governor of Newfoundland, and then British representative in the capital of the Transvaul.

lections," just published in London. relates how, while out walking with Rhodes at Pretoria on that occasion, he remarked chaffingly, "What on earth are you doing here, when your dear friends are in Johannesburg, spending your $50,000?" "Rhodes turned sharply round on me, exclaiming. 'Well, what have you got to say against it? I got what I wanted, didn't I?' 'I replied, 'Yes, you certainly did.' At which he laughed and said no more.'

Sir Brodrick Hartwell, whose affairs are engaging the attention of the Bankruptcy Court in London his liabilities amounting to some $60,000 and his assets $150, is at the present moment on this side of the Atlantic, where he is well known. Indeed, his present wife is a Canadian, being the daughter of Robert M. Jeffrey, of Vancouver, divorced wife of Captain Edgar Chamberlain, of the royal navy. Their marriage was preceded by a somewhat gensational elopement, which resulted not only in the Chamberlain divorce suit, in which Sir Brodrick figured as corespondent, but ilso in an action by the first Lady Hartwell against her husband, and in his being compelled to resign his commission in the army, in which he held the rank of captain in the Leicester regiment. The first Lany Hartwell was a Frenchwoman, the daughter of a French government official of the name of Pilou Fleury, and she was awarded the custody of the only child of this union, a daughter. Sir Brod-rick has a son and heir by his second and Canadian wife.

The Hartwells have been settled in Ireland since the reign of King James, although they are of much older origin, one of them, Sir William Hartwell, having been created a Knight of the Bath on the occasion of the marriage of Arthur, Prince of Wales, elder brother of Henry VIII. The bar-onetcy dates from 1805, and formerly carried with it very extensive estates in the County of Limerick. But they have all been allenated; and the present baronet, who is a son of that Captain Edward Hartwell, of the royal navy, who was for so many years consul-general at Naples, inherited little from his uncle and immediate predecessor in the baronetcy, beyond the mere title.

GOVERNMENT WILL PRESS CHARGES

Second Supplementary Indictment Returned Against "Wall Street Wolf."

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] New York, July 25 .- That the Federal government is determined to press action against David Lamar, known as the "Wolf of Wall Street," became known here to-day when a second supplementary indictment was returned against him on the ground of impersonating a government officer with intent to defraud Lewis Cass Ledyard, J. P. Morgan & Co. and the United States Steel Corporation. Assistant United States District Attorney Walker drew the statement to cover new phases not shown on the one drawn on July 17. It charges Lamar with impersonating Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, and also of impersonating Senator Clarke and Senator Stone, of Missouri.

Washington reports state that Pres ident Wilson has directed the Attor-rey-General to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court in case a United States Supreme Court in case a decision adverse to the government is handed down by the courts here. Lamar is still in Washington, and is being watched by government agents. Federal officials plan to take charge of Lamar immediately on his arrival here unless a change of circumstances make it necessary to arrest him in Washington. Washington.

In No Harry to Return.
Washington, July 25.—David Lamar, the "Wolf of Wall Street," is in no hurry to go to New York, where he is wanted on a charge of "impersonating a Federal officer."

Speaking through his counsel, Henry E. Davis, the "Wolf" stated to-day that his business in Washington made it impossible to say just when he would find it "convenient" to return to Wall Street and the warrant that Davis himself characterized the indictment as an effort to intimidate his client, and stated that there were no grounds for Lamar's arrest. "If the New York Federal authorities wish to arrest Lamar here, let them try it," he concluded defantly.

M. K. LOWRY HURT IN QUEER ACCIDENT

Scalp Cut When Piece of Theatre Spotlight Machine Falls

on Head. M. K. Lowry, United States Collector Virginia, received a painful wound Thursday night while seated in the orchestra of the Colonial Theatre when the glass and metal disk on the front of the calcium spotlight dropped from the first balcony and struck him on the head. Although the blow stunned him, and the metal edge slashed an ugly cut over his right temple, Mr. Lowry escaped without serious injury. After treatment had been rendered in the theatre office by Dr. Lawrence T. Price, the house physician, Mr. Lowry felt well enough to be removed to his rooms in a taxicab. To allay alarm as to his condition, he appeared at his office in the Federal building for a short while yesterday morning. About midday he left the city for his home near Alexandria, fearing that news of his mishap might come to his wife's ears. He expects to remain at his country place for a few days.

The accident created quite a commotion in the theatre, and the management did everything possible to minister to Mr. Lowry's comfort. Ushers were at his side a few seconds after the metal disk fell, and assisted him to leave his place in the orchestra, He was conducted upstairs to the executive offices of the theatre and of Dr. Price. It was seen at once that Mr. Lowry had had a wonderful escape from serious harm.

The portion of the spotlight machine which fell was the metal disk, con-taining small glass panes of a half dozen colors, which fits over the front of the powerful calcium light, and gives the rays the shade desired. While the operator was revolving it Thursday night, its central fastening became loose in some manner and it dropped. Mr. Lowry was occupying a seat directly underneath the spotlight-making machine,
